长城

长城（萬里長城）、是古代中国为抵御不同时期塞北游牧部落联盟的侵袭、修筑规模浩大的军事工程的统称。长城东西绵延上万华里、因此又称作万里长城。西起嘉峪關、東至虎山長城、长城遗址跨越北京、天津、青海、山西、内蒙等15个省市自治区、总计有43721处长城遗产、长城也是自人类文明以来最庞大的文物局报告最新的完整考古研究顯示、明長城全长8851.8公里、其中人工墙体的长度为6259.6公里、壕堑长度为359.7公里、天然险的长度为2232.5公里。[illegible]文物局宣布、歷經近5年的調查和認定、中國歷代長城總長度為21196.18公里。這是中國首次科學、系統地測量歷代長城的總長度。

历代长城

中国北方自古便不安寧、萬里长城的修筑始于春秋戰国时代、已有兩千多年的历史、其中尤以秦、汉、明三時期的规模最大。《延庆州志》記載：“古长城、[illegible]、自上谷以北至辽西。秦始皇因其旧址而大筑之、至今岔道以北迤逦而至永宁一带遗址犹存。”唐朝时、由于北方的突厥已经被平定而不再成为威胁、[illegible]变得没有意义；元朝统治者是蒙古人、仅对一些关口做了修缮、只起到盘查路人和作为商路驿站的作用；与元朝类似、清朝直到滅亡也未修长城。[illegible]存。而到了二十世紀、只有长城戰役勉強算得上再度參與了一次作戰、在長距投射的热兵器的發展與後續蘇聯建置空軍和制導飛彈的出現後、萬里长城已經被[illegible]取代之。

春秋戰國[编辑]

主条目：楚长城、魏长城、齊长城和趙长城 长城在春秋戰國時期即已修築、《诗经 · 小雅 · 出车》记载：“天子命我、城彼朔方。赫赫南仲、玁狁于襄。”。历史上建筑最早的长城、在今山东境内、至密州琅琊台入海、全长500餘公里。但是由於諸侯林立、屬境較小、一般小國長城都只有幾百里。一些大的諸侯[illegible]333年）在漳水、滏水（今滏阳河）附近筑长城、史称“赵南长城”。[2]趙武靈王所築長城、起自代（今河北省蔚縣境內）、終於高闕（今內蒙古烏拉特後旗[illegible]山岭之上筑长城、东至海、西至济州千餘里以备楚”。秦昭王时、攻灭义渠、“于是秦有陇西、北地、上郡、筑长城以拒胡”。燕长城、西起造阳（今河北[illegible]（即燕赵长城）。萬里長城之名、自秦始皇才開始、因此、人們提到萬里長城的時候、往往把它同秦始皇的名字聯繫起來。據司馬遷《史記 · 蒙恬列傳》：[illegible]成旅、收河南。築長城。因地形、用制險塞、起臨洮、至遼東、延袤萬餘里。」

Por qué no morimos los dos

«SOUS NOS YEUX»

La fin du colonialisme français

par Thierry Meyssan

Le président Poutine vient d'écrire dans le New York Times que la guerre de Syrie opposait l'État au jihadisme international. Dans le même temps, le président Hollande a affirmé à TF1 qu'il s'agissait d'une guerre pour la démocratie. Le second se trompe, comme le montre la continuation de son raisonnement avec un champ de bataille à trois Les États-Unis et la Russie sont convenus, lors de la conférence de Genève 1, en juin 2012, de se partager le Proche-Orient sur les décombres des accords Sykes-Picot de 1916. Ce que l'on présentait comme une volonté de trouver une paix juste et durable signifiait en réalité à la fois revenir à un monde bipolaire comme à l'époque de l'Union soviétique, et exclure les Britanniques et les Français de la région. Ce projet pouvait sembler illusoire. Pourtant, quatorze mois plus tard, il trouve un début de réalisation.

Jusqu'à présent, les Européens avaient bien joué. En novembre 2010, Nicolas Sarkozy et David Cameron signaient le Traité de Lancaster House par lequel leurs deux pays mettaient en commun leurs forces de projection, c'est-à-dire leurs forces coloniales. Comme convenu des troubles en Libye et en Syrie. À leurs agents libyens, ils donnaient le drapeau de l'ancien roi Idriss, collaborateur des Britanniques. Tandis qu'à l'Armée syrienne libre, ils donnaient le drapeau du mandat français. Il suffisait de voir leurs symboles pour comprendre que ces mouvements prétendument révolutionnaires étaient des fabrications des anciens occupants.

Avec l'aide du Qatar et de l'Arabie saoudite, ils arrivaient à semer la confusion dans les deux pays. Une partie des oppositions à Moammar el-Kadhafi et à Bachar el-Assad se ralliaient un temps avec les jihadistes de l'Otan. Cependant, si la Jamahiriya libyenne succomba sous les bombardements, faute d'al-renverser les institutions, mais de choisir son avenir. Progressivement les malentendus se dissipèrent. Aujourd'hui, comme dans toutes les guerres, il ne reste que deux camps: l'État laïque d'un côté, contre le jihadisme international de l'autre.

De la même manière, durant la Seconde Guerre mondiale, Charles de Gaulle fut isolé lors de son appel du 18 juin 1940. Très peu de Français lui répondirent, soit qu'ils pensaient la guerre perdue avant d'être commencée, soit qu'ils ne supportaient pas son caractère autocratique. Pourtant, quatre ans plus tard, il rassembla derrière lui 95% des Français, d'une part parce qu'il les conduisait à la victoire et d'autre part parce

I am Buffalo Bill's horse. I have spent my life under his saddle—with him in it, too, and he is good for two hundred pounds, without his clothes; and there is no telling how much he does weigh when he is out on the war-path and has his batteries belted on. He is over six feet, is young, hasn't an ounce of waste flesh, is straight, graceful, springy in his motions, quick as a cat, and has a handsome face, and black hair dangling down on his shoulders,

Το ελληνικό αλφάβητο είναι το αλφαβητικό σύστημα γραφής που χρησιμοποιείται για τη γραφή της ελληνικής γλώσσας, από τον 8ο αιώνα π.Χ. Προέρχεται από το φοινικικό αλφάβητο και με τη σειρά του έγινε ο πρόγονος πολυάριθμων συστημάτων γραφής της Ευρώπης και της Μέσης Ανατολής, συμπεριλαμβανόμενης της λατινικής και της κυριλλικής γραφής. Επιπλέον, χρησιμοποιείτ ως πηγή τεχνικών συμβόλων για χρήση σε διάφορες επιστήμες. Στην κλασική και σύγχρονη μορφή του, το ελληνικό αλφάβητο διαθέτει 24 γράμματα, ταξινομημένα από το άλφα ως το ωμέγα. Όπως το λατινικό και κυριλλικό αλφάβητο, είχε αρχικά μόνο έναν τύπο για κάθε γράμμα. Η διάκριση

I am Buffalo Bill's horse. I have spent my life under his saddle—with him in it, too, and he is good for two hundred pounds, without his clothes; and there is no telling how much he does weigh when he is out on the war-path and has his batteries belted on. He is over six feet, is young, hasn't an ounce of waste flesh, is straight, graceful, springy in his motions, quick as a cat, and has a handsome face, and black hair dangling down on his shoulders, and is beautiful to look at; and nobody is braver than he is, and nobody is stronger, except myself.

The Bulgarian National Corpus:
Theory and Practice in Corpus Design 65
Svetla Koeva, Ivelina Stoyanova, Svetlozara Leseva, Tsvetana Dimitrova, performance indicators were measured: the recall and precision of the phonological phrase boundary recovery, the average time deviation between detected and reference phonological phrase boundaries and the accuracy of the classification regarding the type of phonological phrases.

The recall is measured with the following formula:

$$\text{Recall} = \frac{tp}{tp + fn}, \tag{1}$$

where tp stands for true positives, that is, the number of phonological phrase boundaries correctly found within 150 ms of the original one in the reference; fn stands for false negatives, that is, the number of missed phonological phrase boundaries (present in reference but not detected).

Precision is measured as:

$$\text{Precision} = \frac{tp}{tp + fp}, \tag{2}$$

where fp stands for false positives: phonological phrase boundaries detected where they should not be according to the reference, or more than 150 ms apart from reference phonological phrase boundary.

The recall of phonological phrase alignment-based prosodic segmentation was 82.1%, the precision was 77.7%.

The average time deviation (σ_t) of segmentation for phonological phrases was measured for true positives as:

where tp stands again for the number of phonological phrase boundaries correctly found within 150 ms vicinity of the reference boundary. t_i is the detection time of the ith phonological phrase boundary, t_i^{ref} is the location of the corresponding reference boundary. For the above tests, average time deviation was found to be: $\sigma_t = 50.4$ ms.

Finally, classification accuracy is measured as the ratio of correctly classified phonological phrase boundaries (tp_{cc}) versus all true positive phonological phrase boundaries (tp):

$$\text{Acc} = \frac{tp_{cc}}{tp}. \tag{4}$$

Classification accuracy was found to equal overall 73.1%.

3.6 Prosodic segmentation vs. word boundaries

Vicsi and Szaszák used a similar prosodic segmentation for phonological phrases to partially recover word boundaries in Hungarian and Finnish languages (Vicsi-Szaszák, 2010), (Vicsi-Szaszák, 2005). Of course not all phonological phrase boundaries coincide with word boundaries, the authors also underline that for Hungarian, a word boundary detector in the strict sense cannot be implemented in contrast to the mentioned Japanese (Hirose et al., 2001). However, they trained the prosodic-acoustic models of phonological phrases on samples in which phonological phrase boundaries coincided with word boundaries. Highly relying on the first syllable fixed stress of Hungarian, word boundaries were predicted in the vicinity of phonological phrase boundaries. Analysis of word boundary detection rates based on phonological phrase alignment showed 77.3% precision and 57.2% recall rate for Hungarian (on BABEL speech database), 69.2% precision and 76.8% recall rate for Finnish allowing a maximum of ± 100–150 ms deviation between phonological phrase and word boundary markers (Vicsi-Szaszák, 2005). The goal of the experiments described in present paper can be related to this issue, namely, to prove or to disclaim the conjecture that the detected word boundaries correlate well with syntactic phrase boundaries, while missed word boundaries are more likely to be embedded within a syntactic phrase, and therefore tend to form a union both prosodically and syntactically.

4 ANALYSING THE PROSODY-TO-SYNTAX MAPPING

The main goal of the paper is to present a detailed analysis regarding the prosody-to-syntax automatic mapping possibilities in spoken language. This implies the comparison between the prosodic and syntactic structures, obtained based on analyses presented so far both for prosody and syntax. The syntactic phrasing will be used as reference, and hence – although it was primarily obtained in automatic way – it has to be checked and disambiguated by human experts. The automatically obtained prosodic phrasing on the other hand is left intact as it is produced by the prosodic segmenter tool. The reason for this is that this approach will permit to evaluate the usability of the pro-phrases.

The recall is measured with the following formula:

$$\text{Recall} = \frac{tp}{tp + fn}, \tag{1}$$

where tp stands for true positives, that is, the number of phonological phrase boundaries correctly found within 150 ms of the original one in the reference; fn stands for false negatives, that is, the number of missed phonological phrase boundaries (present in reference but not detected).

Precision is measured as:

$$\text{Precision} = \frac{tp}{tp + fp}, \tag{2}$$

where fp stands for false positives: phonological phrase boundaries detected where they should not be according to the reference, or more than 150 ms apart from reference phonological phrase boundary.

The recall of phonological phrase alignment-based prosodic segmentation was 82.1%, the precision was 77.7%.

The average time deviation (σ_t) of segmentation for phonological phrases was measured for true positives as:

them. Other propositions are true with only conditional necessity: "Socrates is sitting down", for instance, or "Plato is going for a walk" is necessarily true while (and only while) Socrates is in fact sitting down and Plato is in fact going for a walk, respectively. The same is true for phenomena like chariot races: the drivers' skillful maneuvers are necessary while I am observing them, but they were not necessary beforehand, since they are the result of the drivers' free will. Thus, things and events that are simply necessary are so because of their own nature; things and events that are conditionally necessary are so owing to extrinsic or accidental circumstances.

4. BOETHIUS ON PREDESTINATION AND FREE WILL

This argument is in fact based on an adaptation of the Aristotelian definition of knowledge: if I know something, then the object of my knowledge necessarily[150] is the way I know it to be, simply because that's the way knowledge (Greek epistêmê, Latin scientia, Arabic 'ilm) is defined – at least in one of its many Aristotelian senses.[151]

4.2.1. The distinction between absolute and conditional necessity[152]

One Aristotelian text that is important in this regard is this one from the De interpretatione (19a23-6):

> That what exists is when it is, and what does not exist is not when it is not, necessary.[153]

For Aristotle, there can be epistêmê in this strict sense – the sense, that is, in which such knowledge is always true (APo II, 19, 100b18) – only of universals.[154] Indeed, the reason why knowledge is bereft of falsehood is that it is necessary for things to be in the way knowledge understands them to be.[155] This is clear, for instance, from a passage from the Nicomachean Ethics (VI, 3, 1139b20-25):

> We all suppose that what we know is not capable of being otherwise (...) therefore the object of knowledge is of necessity. Therefore it is eternal, for things that are of necessity in the unqualified sense are all eternal[156]; and things that are eternal are ungenerated and imperishable.

The reason this distinction is important is as follows: the Narrator reasons that (1) necessarily, if an event p will happen, then God foresees it ($N(p \longrightarrow F(G, p))$; and (2) necessarily, if God foresees p, it will happen ($N(F(G, p) \longrightarrow p)$). Note that the necessity here bears upon the entire implication: it is a necessitas consequentiae. It has been argued[157] that Boethius now makes a simple logical mistake, inferring from (1) and (2) that (3) if p, then necessarily God foresees p ($p \longrightarrow NF(G, p)$, and (4) if God foresees p, then necessarily p ($F(G, p) \longrightarrow Np$), where in both the latter cases the necessity bears upon the consequent (necessitas consequentis).

Yet it is not the case that it is necessary now that (p) be true, and it is also not the case that it is necessary that (~p) be true, i.e.

$$\sim(Np) \wedge \sim(N\sim p)$$

I believe this analysis is mistaken. Boethius does believe both (3) and (4) are true, but they are true only conditionally, where the condition is God's knowledge. In other words, the necessity imposed by God's knowledge of a future event is of the same kind as that which necessitates that Socrates be sitting when I know he is sitting: such conditional necessity (kath' hupothesin in Greek[158]; secundum praecessionem in the Latin of Chalcidius[159]) imposes no constraint upon Socrates, but simply concerns the nature of knowledge.[160] As Boethius will claim, such future events can be said to be necessary with regard to God's knowledge but free with regard to their own nature.

Вященника ἐσσήν (так Иосиф Флавий воспроизводит греческими буквами библейский термин !v,x, хошен) соответствует греческий термин λόγιον, «прорицание» (ср. Септуагинту: λογεῖον).

These considerations go some way toward explaining the key point of how God can know future events, which are by their nature indeterminate, in a determinate way. The reason why this seems counter-intuitive to us is 150 As Weidemann points out (1998, 198), Boethius' addition of the modal operator "necessarily" transforms Aristotle's consequentiality relation of being into a consequentiality relation of necessity.

I am Buffalo Bill's horse. I have spent my life under his saddle—with him in it, too, and he is good for two hundred pounds, without his clothes; and there is no telling how much he does weigh when he is out on the war-path and has his batteries belted on. He is over six feet, is young, hasn't an ounce of waste flesh, is straight, graceful, springy in his motions, quick as a cat, and has a handsome face, and black hair dangling down on his shoulders, and is beautiful
